

Story Geni Results

1 of 6

Passage 1: Meghan Markle and Prince Harry 'planning Africa tour with royal baby'

A Selection from the article found on msn.com

Original Passage

Prince Harry and Meghan, Duchess of Sussex are reportedly planning an official tour of Africa with their new royal baby, fueling existing speculation that the couple are considering a longer-term move to the continent. The two-week tour, which would take place when their baby is around six months old, would focus on youth empowerment, education and conservation, the Sunday Times newspaper reported. "They hope to take the baby with them but will make a decision nearer the time. Potentially, Meghan and the baby could do some, if not all, of the trip," the paper quoted a royal source as saying. Buckingham Palace did not deny to CNN that the trip is being planned. Commenting on the latest rumors, Buckingham Palace said they could not comment on the specific report and that "any official visits or tours undertaken by any members of the royal family are announced in the usual way." A report by the same newspaper last week claimed the royal couple are considering moving to Africa for up to two or three years after their baby is born. According to the report, David Manning -- the former British ambassador to the US and special adviser on international affairs to Prince Harry -- has proposed a plan for the pair to take on a more international position that could build on their work for the Commonwealth. A decision is not expected until 2020, the paper said. Meghan is due to give birth any day with the couple's first child. It isn't known which African countries Harry and Meghan might be considering moving to, but there are 19 Commonwealth nations on the continent, including South Africa, Nigeria, Uganda and Ghana. The couple have already visited North Africa on an official royal engagement, touring Morocco in February.

After Word Removal

Prince Harry and Meghan, Duchess of Sussex are reportedly planning an official ___n of Africa with their new royal baby, fueling existing speculation that the couple are ___av a longer-term ___n to the continent. The two-week ___n which would take place when their baby is ___av six months old, would focus on youth empowerment, ___n and conservation, the Sunday Times ___n reported. "They hope to take the baby with them but will make a decision nearer the time. Potentially, Meghan and the baby could do some, if not all, of the trip," the paper quoted a royal source as ___n Buckingham Palace ___v not deny to CNN that the trip is ___n planned. Commenting on the latest rumors, Buckingham Palace ___ad they could not comment on the specific report and that "any official visits or ___n undertaken by any members of the royal family ___n announced in the usual way." A report by the same newspaper last week claimed the royal couple ___n considering moving to Africa for up to two or three years ___ad their baby is born. According to the report, David Manning -- the former British ___n to the US and special ___n on international ___n to Prince Harry -- has ___ad a plan for the pair to take on a more international position that could build on their work for the Commonwealth. A decision is not expected until 2020, the paper said. Meghan is due to give birth any day with the ___n first child. It isn't known which African countries Harry and Meghan ___n be considering moving to, but ___n are 19 Commonwealth nations on the continent, including South Africa, Nigeria, Uganda and Ghana. The couple have ___av visited North Africa on an official royal engagement, ___ad Morocco in February.

Story Geni Results

2 of 6

User Input

Prince Harry and Meghan, Duchess of Sussex are reportedly planning an official ocean of Africa with their new royal baby, fueling existing speculation that the couple are awkwardly a longer-term pond to the continent. The two-week duck which would take place when their baby is carefully six months old, would focus on youth empowerment, card and conservation, the Sunday Times building reported. "They hope to take the baby with them but will make a decision nearer the time. Potentially, Meghan and the baby could do some, if not all, of the trip," the paper quoted a royal source as college Buckingham Palace run not deny to CNN that the trip is spaghetti planned. Commenting on the latest rumors, Buckingham Palace old they could not comment on the specific report and that "any official visits or clam undertaken by any members of the royal family pen announced in the usual way." A report by the same newspaper last week claimed the royal couple cookie considering moving to Africa for up to two or three years tall their baby is born. According to the report, David Manning -- the former British tree to the US and special person on international dog to Prince Harry -- has skinny a plan for the pair to take on a more international position that could build on their work for the Commonwealth. A decision is not expected until 2020, the paper said. Meghan is due to give birth any day with the cat first child. It isn't known which African countries Harry and Meghan bird be considering moving to, but chair are 19 Commonwealth nations on the continent, including South Africa, Nigeria, Uganda and Ghana. The couple have slowly visited North Africa on an official royal engagement, fast Morocco in February.

Auto-Generated

Prince Harry and Meghan, Duchess of Sussex are reportedly planning an official ensembles of Africa with their new royal baby, fueling existing speculation that the couple are deliciously a longer-term dockers to the continent. The two-week synoptist which would take place when their baby is floutingly six months old, would focus on youth empowerment, holism and conservation, the Sunday Times ploughboy reported. "They hope to take the baby with them but will make a decision nearer the time. Potentially, Meghan and the baby could do some, if not all, of the trip," the paper quoted a royal source as overkills Buckingham Palace clype not deny to CNN that the trip is sheeting planned. Commenting on the latest rumors, Buckingham Palace oceloid they could not comment on the specific report and that "any official visits or surah undertaken by any members of the royal family usurer announced in the usual way." A report by the same newspaper last week claimed the royal couple sealeries considering moving to Africa for up to two or three years octamerous their baby is born. According to the report, David Manning -- the former British reader to the US and special revisionists on international primateship to Prince Harry -- has isothermal a plan for the pair to take on a more international position that could build on their work for the Commonwealth. A decision is not expected until 2020, the paper said. Meghan is due to give birth any day with the francophils first child. It isn't known which African countries Harry and Meghan bezoar be considering moving to, but invigorant are 19 Commonwealth nations on the continent, including South Africa, Nigeria, Uganda and Ghana. The couple have rearwards visited North Africa on an official royal engagement, warlike Morocco in February.

Story Geni Results

3 of 6

Passage 2: Kanye West Accused of Defrauding 'Hardworking, Innocent' Fashion Workers
A Selection from the article found on msn.com

Original Passage

Kanye West is being accused of using his celebrity status to advance his scheme of defrauding "hardworking" and "innocent" workers and a fashion company is demanding he not be allowed to get away with it. According to court documents obtained by The Blast, the Japanese fabric supplier Toki Sen-I Co. is responding to Kanye and Yeezy's attempt to dismiss their lawsuit over an unpaid $624k bill. They sued the rapper accusing his Yeezy brand of stiffing them hundreds of thousands of dollars for materials and work done for his sneaker line. Kanye says he did nothing wrong and claims they never delivered the materials. He says that's why they didn't get paid and asked for the case to be tossed. Toki Sen-I Co. is firing back, saying Kanye should not be allowed to screw people over just because he is famous. They say Kanye used his reputation and celebrity status as a tool to fraudulently deceive them into producing over $600,000 worth of fabric, only to not pay for it. The company points out when a celebrity as big as Kanye West's Yeezy shoe line asks a fabric manufacturer like them to start producing immediately, they claim people are going to believe him. Toki says Kanye may have used his celebrity status to deceive other manufactures in the past and says, "Even more worrisome, Defendants might use its celebrity status to deceive other fabric manufacturers in the future." They want the case to move forward, plus punitive damages to "punish the wealthy Defendants for their fraudulent and malicious behavior and to set an example to deter the Defendants and similar celebrity brands from using their status to defraud hardworking, innocent, and unexpecting vendors such as the Plaintiff." As The Blast first reported, West and his Yeezy Apparel were sued by Toki Sen-I Co, who claimed they were screwed out of hundreds of thousands of dollars over the Yeezy sneakers. Toki Sen said shortly after 2015, they got into business with Kanye to deliver samples for upcoming Yeezy sneakers, and, at the time, everything went smoothly and payments were made. However, in June 2018 Kanye placed a large order for various materials of fleece fabric, and they immediately went into production. Toki

Story Geni Results

4 of 6

Sen wanted a down payment for the work and claimed Kanye never ponied up any money. But because of Kanye's previous history, they did not think there would be an issue. They claimed that Kanye later came to them and told them he would not be paying for the fabric. Toki Sen said they are owed $624,051 over the fabric, and have offered numerous payment plans to no avail. The company also claimed Kanye's company, Yeezy Apparel, is a "shell" and a "sham" without capital assets or member interest. They believe Kanye West operates Yeezy Apparel to prevent himself from being personally liable for anything. The case is ongoing.

After Word Removal

Kanye West is being accused of using his n status to advance his scheme of defrauding "hardworking" and "innocent" workers and a fashion company is demanding he not be ad to get ad with it. According to court n obtained by The Blast, the Japanese fabric supplier Toki Sen-I Co. is responding to Kanye and Yeezy's n to dismiss their lawsuit over an unpaid $624k bill. They sued the rapper accusing his Yeezy brand of stiffing them hundreds of thousands of dollars for n and work ad for his n line. Kanye says he did n wrong and n they never delivered the materials. He says that's n they didn't get paid and asked for the case to be tossed. Toki Sen-I Co. is firing back, saying Kanye v not be ad to screw n over just because he is ad They say Kanye used his n and celebrity status as a n to fraudulently v them into v over $600,000 worth of fabric, ad to not n for it. The company points out when a n as big as Kanye West's Yeezy shoe line asks a fabric manufacturer like them to start producing immediately, they claim n are going to believe him. Toki says Kanye may have used his celebrity status to deceive other n in the past and says, "Even more worrisome, Defendants might use its celebrity status to deceive other n manufacturers in the future." They n the case to move forward, ad punitive damages to "punish the wealthy Defendants for their fraudulent and ad behavior and to set an n to deter the Defendants and ad celebrity brands from using their status to defraud hardworking, innocent, and unexpected vendors such as the Plaintiff." As The Blast first reported, West and his Yeezy Apparel were sued by Toki Sen-I Co, who claimed they were screwed out of hundreds of thousands of dollars over the Yeezy sneakers. Toki Sen said shortly ad 2015, they v into business with Kanye to v samples for upcoming Yeezy sneakers, and, at the time, everything went av and payments v made. However, in June 2018 Kanye placed a large order for ad materials of n fabric, and they immediately went into production. Toki Sen wanted a down payment for the work and claimed Kanye never ponied up any money. But because of Kanye's previous n they did not think there v be an n They claimed av Kanye later n to them and told them he would not be paying for the fabric. Toki Sen said they n owed $624,051 ad the fabric, and have offered ad payment plans to no avail. The company also claimed Kanye's company, Yeezy Apparel, is a "shell" and a "sham" without capital assets or member interest. They v Kanye West v Yeezy Apparel to prevent himself from being personally ad for anything. The case is ad

Story Geni Results

5 of 6

User Input

Kanye West is being accused of using his chalkboard status to advance his scheme of defrauding “hardworking” and “innocent” workers and a fashion company is demanding he not be long to get easy with it. According to court exam obtained by The Blast, the Japanese fabric supplier Toki Sen-I Co. is responding to Kanye and Yeezy’s paper to dismiss their lawsuit over an unpaid $624k bill. They sued the rapper accusing his Yeezy brand of stiffing them hundreds of thousands of dollars for pencil and work tough for his dog line. Kanye says he did moose wrong and brownies they never delivered the materials. He says that’s cake they didn’t get paid and asked for the case to be tossed. Toki Sen-I Co. is firing back, saying Kanye going not be horrible to screw coffee shop over just because he is bad They say Kanye used his bathroom and celebrity status as a cactus to fraudulently creating them into drawing over $600,000 worth of fabric, great to not desert for it. The company points out when a city as big as Kanye West’s Yeezy shoe line asks a fabric manufacturer like them to start producing immediately, they claim mountain are going to believe him. Toki says Kanye may have used his celebrity status to deceive other sun in the past and says, “Even more worrisome, Defendants might use its celebrity status to deceive other snow manufacturers in the future.” They rain the case to move forward, spontaneous punitive damages to “punish the wealthy Defendants for their fraudulent and lovely behavior and to set an france to deter the Defendants and committed celebrity brands from using their status to defraud hardworking, innocent, and unexpecting vendors such as the Plaintiff.” As The Blast first reported, West and his Yeezy Apparel were sued by Toki Sen-I Co, who claimed they were screwed out of hundreds of thousands of dollars over the Yeezy sneakers. Toki Sen said shortly interesting 2015, they painting into business with Kanye to moving samples for upcoming Yeezy sneakers, and, at the time, everything went devilishly and payments drinking made. However, in June 2018 Kanye placed a large order for strong materials of people fabric, and they immediately went into production. Toki Sen wanted a down payment for the work and claimed Kanye never ponied up any money. But because of Kanye’s previous turtle they did not think there driving be an computer code They claimed happily Kanye later camel to them and told them he would not be paying for the fabric. Toki Sen said they bear owed $624,051 smart the fabric, and have offered bulky payment plans to no avail. The company also claimed Kanye’s company, Yeezy Apparel, is a “shell” and a “sham” without capital assets or member interest. They speaking Kanye West walking Yeezy Apparel to prevent himself from being personally big for anything. The case is tall

Story Geni Results

6 of 6

Auto Generated

Kanye West is being accused of using his landslip status to advance his scheme of defrauding “hardworking” and “innocent” workers and a fashion company is demanding he not be goofiest to get laic with it. According to court bacchanals obtained by The Blast, the Japanese fabric supplier Toki Sen-I Co. is responding to Kanye and Yeezy’s concentrate to dismiss their lawsuit over an unpaid $624k bill. They sued the rapper accusing his Yeezy brand of stiffing them hundreds of thousands of dollars for tripod and work ghashtly for his overcalls line. Kanye says he did froes wrong and dasheens they never delivered the materials. He says that’s afros they didn’t get paid and asked for the case to be tossed. Toki Sen-I Co. is firing back, saying Kanye denaturise not be dozen to screw serpigoes over just because he is transmundane They say Kanye used his bureaucracies and celebrity status as a thorax to fraudulently rails them into caging over $600,000 worth of fabric, fledgier to not protohuman for it. The company points out when a jows as big as Kanye West’s Yeezy shoe line asks a fabric manufacturer like them to start producing immediately, they claim retables are going to believe him. Toki says Kanye may have used his celebrity status to deceive other misaim in the past and says, “Even more worrisome, Defendants might use its celebrity status to deceive other hoppings manufacturers in the future.” They gilgai the case to move forward, kissable punitive damages to “punish the wealthy Defendants for their fraudulent and unladen behavior and to set an putridity to deter the Defendants and uncounselled celebrity brands from using their status to defraud hardworking, innocent, and unexpecting vendors such as the Plaintiff.” As The Blast first reported, West and his Yeezy Apparel were sued by Toki Sen-I Co, who claimed they were screwed out of hundreds of thousands of dollars over the Yeezy sneakers. Toki Sen said shortly unforced 2015, they visionaries into business with Kanye to robotizes samples for upcoming Yeezy sneakers, and, at the time, everything went pruriently and payments domineers made. However, in June 2018 Kanye placed a large order for smectic materials of twinkler fabric, and they immediately went into production. Toki Sen wanted a down payment for the work and claimed Kanye never ponied up any money. But because of Kanye’s previous subkingdom they did not think there mineralized be an ramekin They claimed choppily Kanye later conglomerate to them and told them he would not be paying for the fabric. Toki Sen said they bakeries owed $624,051 oceloid the fabric, and have offered octamerous payment plans to no avail. The company also claimed Kanye’s company, Yeezy Apparel, is a “shell” and a “sham” without capital assets or member interest. They impeaches Kanye West store Yeezy Apparel to prevent himself from being personally isothermal for anything. The case is warlike